As a citizen who pays for the public airwaves, I am outraged by Sinclair Broadcasting's misuse of its position to air partisan material as part of its mainstream programming that is NOT an ad paid for by a political party. If the company presented a balanced view, e.g. material that gave a fair chance to both candidates with equal broadcast time at the same time slot, that would perhaps be more acceptable. This is too important of an election for our (still) democratic country to stand for shenanigans and abuse of this kind. If the FCC and the current administration were public companies, a harshly critical eye would be cast on the powerful affiliations between Mr. Powell and Mr. Bush, and the questionable motives behind the FCC's decision to throw up its hands and say "this isn't our business."
